Edgbaston is a well-established, sought-after location for forward thinking companies within a thriving commercial, leisure and lifestyle community.

Voted one of the 'best places to live in Britain' by the Sunday Times, its elegant period properties, green spaces and tree-lined avenues bely its close proximity to Birmingham's bustling city centre, just a mile away.

At the cultural heart of Edgbaston sits Edgbaston Village, (edgbastonvillage.co.uk), home to award-winning bars, restaurants and café's along with a range of sandwich bars, shops, a supermarket and gyms.

But don't let the gentle demeanour fool you: Edgbaston means business. The nearby Edgbaston Medical Quarter (edgbastonmedicalquarter.co.uk), is home to a genuinely world-class medical and life sciences community of hospitals, clinics, specialist care centres and training facilities. In addition, the well-established commercial office space provides a flourishing business populace.

And yet, despite all this, Edgbaston isn't resting on its laurels. Work is underway on New Garden Square, a visionary and landmark £330m mixed-use regeneration scheme which will create a contemporary gateway into Birmingham where people can live, work and play.

With all this and more within a short stroll, 100 Hagley Road not only makes commercial sense, but also significantly contributes to the health and wellbeing of employees.
